Title: Assistant/Associate/Full Professor of Supply Chain & Operations Management

Department: Supply Chain & Information Management Group
The D’Amore-McKim School of Business

Location: Boston Main Campus

Full time/Part time: Full Time

Position Summary:
The D’Amore-McKim School of Business at Northeastern University invites applications for tenured or tenure-track positions in the Supply Chain & Information Management Group (SC&IM) of the School, with employment beginning in 2014-15.

Responsibilities
The D’Amore-McKim School of Business invites applications for tenure/tenure-track assistant/associate/full professor positions in the field of Supply Chain Management (SCM) within the Supply Chain & Information Management Group. Primary duties of the position include teaching undergraduate and graduate courses in supply chain management and additional assignments in operations management (OM), conducting scholarly research, undertaking professional activities such as presentations at professional conferences, and performing service in the D’Amore-McKim School of Business and the University. Employment terms are competitive and negotiable depending on career progress and track record. Support for research is available.

Qualifications
Candidates must have a doctorate in SCM/OM or a closely related business field by the start date; those who will complete their doctoral requirements prior to the start date will also be considered. Candidates must have a strong commitment to excellence in teaching and scholarly research, and to working with a diverse population of students and staff. The SC&IM Group is fully committed to the University’s strategic initiatives in multidisciplinary research in healthcare, sustainability, and business analytics. The applicants will be ranked according to evidence of scholarly research and publications, teaching background, and/or industry expertise related to the above strategic goals.
